Gambetta's Ailment

NEW YORK, January 2.—A Paris paper gives the following version of the causes as related by the friends of the dead statesman, setting aside the old story of the pistol shot fired at him by the mother of his son, which is strongly denied. The most plausible version is that after having received the accidental wound in the fore arm he became inpatient at his detention at home, which was intensified by the alarming stories regarding his condition which filled the press and by others of a more annoying nature which his enemies indulged in: The wound was healing nicely, but his desire to appear in public to silence his enemies grew so that he requested Dr. Lannelongue to stop the suppuration, which he did, though he pointed out the dauger Gambetta was running, but to which he was dea". The doctor, against his better judgment, id did as requested, and in a few hours the pus from the wound being debarred its inatural optlet, took another course, burrowing under the skin towards the shoulder and soon manifested itself in two large phlagmous under the armpit. This caused him the greatest pain. He had arrisen from his bed, hoping to be able to take a trip to Paris the next day, but he had to retire at once, when a slight fever appeared. This was subdued in two days and hope began to revive. But on the Sunday night before Christmas Gambetta, who was always a great eater, dined heartily, and becoming excited during a political discussion, suffered a relapse, the fever again appearing. It then amounted to $3,800. The money, by an act of the Legislature, was subsequently, treated ad accumulated to $16,000, and State had accumulated to *$16,000, and Staten Island lawyers became interested in the matter. It being conceded that Denis Doyle was dead a search was begun for his heirs, and James Doyle, a gardener and a son of Denis Doyle, was found in Boston. He produced satisfactory proof as to his identity and the money was paid to him a few days ago by County Treasurer Robin-son.

An old frame building, the property of ward, was destroyed by fire between 8 and 9 o'clock yesterday morning. It was occupied by a miner named Hugh Carr and his family of seven children. It, appears that Mr. Carr had left for his work very early in the morning, and that his oldest child, a girl of fifteen years, after having prepared her father's breakfast, had, made a large fire to warm up the house and had gone back to bed. The fireplace being out of rebeatr, a cupboard adjoining it took fire from a place where the bricks had become displaced, from whence the flames communicated to the building. The fire was not discovered by the inmates or the neighbors until it was too late to save anything, and the children barely escaped with their night clothes, barefooted. Ill fortune seems to have followed Mr. ward, was destroyed by fire between 8 and save anything, and the children barely escaped with their night clothes, barefooted.

Ill fortune seems to have followed Mr. Carr very closely, as he lost his wife last summer, and had only recently recovered from a long sick spell, in addition to having two of his children ill. As soon as work was received down town of these ing two of his children ill. As soon as word was received down town of the occur-rence, Isaac Wagner, with characteristic thoughtfulness, prepared a relief subscription paper, and by noon had collected $20 for the unfortunate and entirely destitute for the unfortunate and entirely destitute family. There was, apparently, no effort made to stay the progress of the flames, as the house, was situated in the remotest part of the town; and the owner of the property, who lives within sight of it, did not know of her loss until noon.

Louisville, Ky., January 2 .- Vice Chan cellor Simrall decided an important sui to-day. Atkinson & Blakemore brought suit against the Western Union Telegraph Company to recover damages for an error in the transmission of a message sent in cipher from St. Joseph, Mo., last June. The error was in the substitution of St. Louis for St. Joseph. The translated message read: "Can buy one hundred thousand thirteen and a half average winter shoulders at $8.40. These are bottom figures." The change in the date-line caused delay, and in the meantime the prices of provisions went up and prevented the transaction at the figures specified, the plaintiffs thereby losing the commission. The defence set up was that the message was unrepeated, therefore under the contract printed on
